

TAXABILITY OF EMPLOYEE BENEFITS

WHAT ARE EMPLOYEE BENEFITS?

An employee benefit is any benefit provided or paid by the employer for the benefit of the employee or the employee's family. Benefits are generally included in the employee's wage for tax purposes, except those benefits that qualify for exclusion. A table describing the taxability of common employee benefits begins on page two of this information sheet.

WHO IS AN EMPLOYEE?

For Unemployment Insurance (UI), Employment Training Tax (ETT), and State Disability Insurance* (SDI) purposes, "employee" includes an officer of a corporation, an employee under the usual common law rules, and any worker whose services are specifically covered by law. For more information, refer to Information Sheet: Employment, DE 231.

For Personal Income Tax (PIT) purposes, "employee" includes a resident of California who receives remuneration for services performed within or without this state, a nonresident who receives remuneration for services performed within this state, or an officer of a corporation. However, the term "employee" has different meanings in relation to the types of benefits shown in the Fringe Benefits section of the attached table. For example:

- For working condition fringes, the term "employee" includes a current employee, a partner who performs services for the partnership, a director of the employer, and any independent contractor who performs services for the employer.
- For qualified transportation reimbursements and qualified moving expense reimbursements, the term "employee" includes a current employee and a leased employee who has provided services on a substantially full-time basis for at least a year under the employer's primary direction and control. For these benefits, however, "employee" does not include a 2 percent shareholder/employee of an S corporation.

PLEASE NOTE: For determining the taxability of employee benefits, the definition of who qualifies as an employee is the same for California purposes as it is for federal purposes, with one important exception: California law provides that a registered domestic partner (as defined in Section 297 of the Family Code) is the same as a spouse, except when in conflict with federal law.

WHAT ARE WAGES?

Wages are payments made to an employee for his or her personal services, including commissions, bonuses, and the reasonable cash value of all amounts paid to employees in any medium other than cash (for example, taxable benefits).

WHAT ARE BENEFITS THAT QUALIFY FOR EXCLUSION FROM INCOME?

"Wages" does not include any benefit that is qualified for exclusion from income. To be qualified, the benefit must be either specifically excluded from wages (income) in the California Unemployment Insurance Code (CUIC) or excluded in the CUIC by reference to the Revenue and Taxation Code or the Internal Revenue Code.

Benefits may be excluded from wages in full, partially, or only to the extent that certain conditions are met. Please note the attached table does not explain the conditions for the excluded benefits. The table only addresses the taxability of the benefits when all the required conditions have been met.
